

THE NEW YORK TIMES, FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 2008

★ 'YOU & ME, SOMETIMES . . .' In this intriguingly textured group show, organized by Sandra Antelo-Suarez, history, politics, pop culture and conceptualism do a dance, and objects glance off one another without quite touching. Cool shows tend to work this way at present, to be about something but not. And any show with Minerva Cuevas, Allan Kaprow, Karin Schneider and Francisco de Goya tends to work well, and it is even better when the show includes work by artists not often seen here: in this case the young Bosnian conceptualist Sejla Kameric; the New Zealand filmmaker Darcy Lange; Mario Garcia Torres of Mexico City; and the Italian-born Claudio Perna (1937-1997). Lehmann Maupin, 201 Chrystie Street, at Stanton Street, Lower East Side, (212) 254-0054, lehmannmaupin.com, through May 3. (Cotter)